Body of E. W. Button Found Early Monday on Erie Tracks

Discovery Made by Lester Perkins on His Way to Work—Body Completely Severed — Identity Established by Means of Bus Stub with Pencil Notation — Believed That Train Started as He Was Crawling Through.

The lifeless body of Edwin W. Button of Riverside, severed by a passing train, was the gruesome discovery of Lester Perkins, an employee of the Addison Dairymen's League plant, as he walked down the Erie tracks to his work Monday morning. The body was found at a point on the tracks directly in front of the residence of D. L. Sherwood, Dairymens' League plant manager, and to the rear of the Kendall storage tanks.

Mr. Perkins notified Mr. Sherwood and the latter immediately notified Police Chief Elmer C. Bovee and Rexford Dyer, Erie station agent. The only clue to the man's identity proved to be the stub of a bus ticket with the name "Button" written in pencil. Coroner Cobb was called and the body was removed to the undertaking rooms of S. D. MacDowell. Following identification, the body was removed to the Ryal and Jones Home for Funerals where burial services were held Wednesday afternoon.

Investigation by the Corning police and the district attorney's office leads to the belief that Mr. Button had tried to crawl between two cars of a standing train and that while so doing the train started, carrying him to Addison where he fell beneath the train. A member of the Corning police force informed District Attorney Cahill that Harry Sawdey, a taxi driver had seen a man hanging by one hand and one foot from a freight which was starting to move at about one-thirty Monday morning. Mr. Sawdey, it is said, endeavored to call attention of the crew to the plight of the man who was calling for help.

Reports from Hornell indicate that Floyd Button, son of the man whose body was found, may have been a member of the crew on the train beneath which it is believed the father fell to his death. The son, it is said, waved to his father as the latter was standing near the tracks at Riverside. It is thought probable that the man started to climb through the train a moment later and while doing so, the train was set in motion.

Burr S. Newman, Retired Addison Barber, Passes After Several Years of Declining Health

Noted in Early Days of Film Industry as First to Open Movie Theatre in New York State—Born in Town of Tuscarora — Attended Addison and Oneonta Schools—Funeral Tomorrow.

Burr S. Newman, retired Addison barber and moving picture proprietor, died shortly after seven o'clock Tuesday morning at his home on Farnham street. He had been in failing health for about two years.

To Mr. Newman belonged the distinction of having opened the first moving picture theatre in New York State, approximately thirty-five years ago. The "movies" were then in their infancy and Mr. Newman's theatre, a "nickelodeon" as it was known, was located in Corning. His oldest son, John, now of Toledo, Ohio, was associated with him in the venture. The theatre was operated by Mr. Newman and his son for approximately five years. Later, with Mrs. Newman, he was engaged in the theatre business in Addison, although he continued his devotion to the barbering profession which had occupied most of his early years.

Mr. Newman was born in the town of Tuscarora, February 11, 1861, a son of Philo and Elizabeth Manley Newman. He atteended the Addison school and later the school at Oneonta. In addition to Addison, he had lived at times in Elmira and other communities of New York State. On March 30, 1884, he was married to Miss Delphine Miller of Woodhull. He was a member of Addison Union Lodge, No. 118, F. & A. M., and of the First Baptist Church. Of genial disposition and reliable in his dealings, he enjoyed wide popularity among his fellows.

Surviving are: his widow, Mrs. Delphine Newman of Addison; three sons, John of Toledo, Ohio, Jay of Salamanca, N. Y., and Stacy B. of Addison; three grandchildren, Janet and Jane Newman of Fremont, O., and Norma Newman of Addison; one brother, Coke Newman of Bradford, Pa.; a nephew, Philo Stroud of Oklahoma; and a niece, Mrs. Elizabeth Raver of Bradford, Pa.

The funeral will be held Friday at his late home on Farnham street, the Rev. Kenneth E. Arnold, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Addison, officiating. Burial will be in Addison Cemetery.

Rev. J. V. Axtell Elected Chaplain of Steuben PMA

Addison Clergyman Honored at Hornell Gathering of Masonic Past Masters—E. J. Jerry of Risingville is New Association President—Several From Addison Attend.

The Rev. John V. Axtell, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Addison, was elected chaplain of the Past Masters' Association of the Steuben Masonic District at the annual meeting in the Masonic Temple at Hornell Thursday evening. The Rev. Mr. Axtell was named to succeed the Rev. Harry L. Somers, former pastor of the Presbyterian church at Canisteo.

Other officers chosen were as follows: president, Emmon J. Jerry of Risingville, succeeding George J. House of Hornell; vice president, George Fox of Wayland, succeeding Mr. Jerry; secretary, John W. Kennedy of Avoca; assistant secretary, Rolland W. Kennedy of Avoca; treasurer, Frank Arnold of Avoca. The last three were all re-elected.

Mr. House, retiring president of the association and retiring district deputy grand master, presided at the banquet. Among masonic notables introduced were Surrogate George W. Pratt of Corning, recently appointed a member of the board of custodians of the State Grand Lodge, Erwin Jaycox of Hammondsport, grand director, and Frank Empey of Bath, new district deputy. A musical program was presented. At the afternoon business session, Surrogate Pratt spoke on "Respect for the Flag" and F. Harold Hollister of Montour Lodge, No. 168, discussed Masonic organization work.

Those from Addison Union Lodge, No. 118, in attendance were: Charles L. Crane, Frank Reynolds, Samuel C. Erwin, Lester S. Andrews, the Rev. Mr. Axtell and Joseph Bailey, the latter a resident of Bath but a member of Addison Union Lodge.

Option Secured For New Theatre

If present plans carry, Addison will boast a thoroughly modern moving picture house with a seating capacity of approximately six hundred before the end of the summer. According to Walter A. Smith, manager of the Avon, a movement is now afoot to proceed with the construction of a new, larger and more modern playhouse for Addison and it is said that an option has been obtained on a suitable Main Street location.

The venture will be financed by the sale of stock to local residents, although it is stated that ample backing to get the proposition underway is now in prospect. Plans are being drawn by the architect who designed one of the Corning theatres and no effort is being spared to incorporate every modern convenience looking to the comfort of the patrons. It is expected that the new theatre, if plans materialize, will be equipped with RCA sound and that it will be one of the most inviting showhouses to be found among the smaller communities of the Southern Tier. The same type of first class pictures, as featured by Manager Smith at the Avon, will be shown, but opportunity will be afforded to book more recent releases.

As a test of interest in the proposal for a new theatre, a questionnaire was printed in last week's issue of this paper. It is said that replies so far received indicate an overwhelming sentiment in favor of the proposal.

Candidate for the Republican Nomination as Member of Assembly

One Cent Lopped Off Gasoline Tax Yesterday

Motorists wore a smile yesterday as the price of gas hit the shutes with a drop of one cent. This reduction came through the action of the state legislature who insisted that faith be kept with the public by lopping off one cent of the emergency tax of two cents a gallon imposed about two years ago.

Assemblymen were opposed in this action by Governor Lehman, but the Republican controlled lower house stood out for the reduction until the Governor and Senate fell in Line. The state is still collecting a tax of three cents a gallon on gas, while the federal government takes another cent out of the motorist's pocket every time he buys a gallon.

Cole Record One of Opposition To New Deal

With the end of the Seventy-fourth Congress, the first term of Representative W. Sterling Cole of the Thirty-seventh District comes to a close. His history in Washington is a consistent record of party adherence in fighting the New Deal Administration and its legislation introduced in Congress.

REP. W. S. COLE

The Bath Republican made very few speeches in the House. However, his few addresses attracted attention for their criticism of various phases of the New Deal.

Supported Bonus Veto

Congressman Cole was one of the few who voted to support the President's veto of the two-billion dollar bonus payment.

He voted against the 800 million dollar tax bill, made necessary by the invalidation of the AAA; against the $1,500,000,000 work relief appropriation; against the bill to extend the neutrality law another year, because he did not think the legislation offered was strong enough to effect its purpose; against the substitute Guffy coal bill, made neces-

THE "WHIPPING BOY"

An article in a recent issue of the Saturday Post tells how boss Farley has taken much of the curse away from Mr. Roosevelt by accepting blame for everything and anything which has happened during the present administration. Farley has been the official "whipping boy" of the present regime, and in taking the stripes which the President should feel has diverted much animosity away from Mr. Roosevelt.

Whatever sympathy might be stirred for the Democratic boss is immediately quited by the fact Farley is an extremely thick-skinned individual whose acts as Postmaster-General entitle him to a lot more public censure than he has ever received. And to go back of his days in Washington the Farley record tells of measily grafting tricks as boxing commissioner when the supposedly big-hearted politician did not hesitate to strip many a poor fighter of every cent he earned by being pounded up in the prize-fighting ring. But the fact Farley has been taking the blame for administration acts through the past three years will not absolve Mr. Roosevelt of responsibility for many things when the voters go to the polls next November. Back of the Democratic National Chairman, the New York Chairman and the Postmaster-General there looms the figure of another man the spotlight has been playing up as a super friend of the people, even though that figure has been the master politician of them all. Farley may execute the adroit moves of politics whereby the Civil Service has been wrecked to provide patronage jobs, yet Mr. Roosevelt's will to be re-elected is the mainspring of the whole movement.

Why was the AAA carefully planned to build up an army of Democratic job-holders who would permeate the great farm areas leaven in bread? Why did the NRA attempt to gain control of every business in the country and threaten free speech and freedom of the press? Why did the federal government send out millions of pieces of propaganda material designed to set up class against class and cast discredit upon every man frugal enough to come to any worldly success? The answer to all these questions is simply this—to delude the great masses of voters into thinking Roosevelt is the only man in the world who has sympathy in his heart.

No man should be denied credit for a good deed done for the recipient alone. But the man who becomes such an opportunist he will play politics with human mistery so as to perpetuate himself in office does not deserve credit. Mr. Roosevelt claims the banks of the country were all saved by his masterful stroke in March, 1933, when as a matter of fact the banks and financial structure of the country were actually brought to the point of ruin by his refusing to give the country any assurance in February of that year that he would live up to the Democratic platform plank of sound money. Roosevelt and not Hoover was to blame for the bank crisis in 1933, and when election comes next fall Mr. Farley will no longer be the sole object of public punishment.

The truth of the matter regarding this administration is that Farley has been shooting many of the bullets, but Roosevelt made the bullets. Roosevelt the stamp collector profited richly by the stamps Postmaster General Farley miscreated, but does anyone believe Farley himself would have thought out alone this method of making valuable stamps? This is only one example ofRoosevelt-Farley strategy, yet a team which can put over this slick trick in the Federal Postoffice Department can be pastmasters at the art of getting votes with money voted for relief. Fortunately for this country the press of the nation refused to accept a yoke in the form of licensing under NRA, and the press is almost unanimous today in denouncing the political chicanery which is hatched in Washington.

A MILLION JOBS LOST

A million men thrown out of employment by one New Deal measure.

The above is not a charge made by someone who is disgruntled, by some political critic, by an anti-New Dealer, by a chronic fault-finder. It is a statement of fact found in a New Deal Government report.

A group of government experts were assigned to investigate the facts and to report on some of the results following the enactment of the AAA. In September of 1935, their report was made. It was signed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace himself and put away in the file. Evidently the Ssecretary did not read it, or, if he did, he recognized the danger and did what he could to bury it securely, for Senators and Congressmen asking for it were told that the original was "not available".

A resolution in the Senate brought it to light and a Senator was permitted to read the original, which was then returned to Mr. Wallace's office. Later, a revised report, more acceptable to the Administration, was issued. But the original report still exists. It contains this paragraph:

"A permanent drastic restriction in domestic cotton acreage would cause serious problems of finding alternative opportunties for the labor and production resources normally used in cotton production. Rough approximations indicate that 27,000,000 acres of cotton harvested in the United States in 1934 utilized the services of almost 1,000,000 fewer man-equivalents than were used during the five-year period 1928-1932, when an average of 40,550,000 acres of cotton were harvested annually."

So here you have one New Deal measure, the operation of which took out of employment one million men in this one industry.

With this record in this one industry, are you wondering how many men were thrown out of employment by all New Deal activities?

WANTED: THE FACTS ABOUT WPA

Decision has been reserved, in the United States District Court, on the Government's plea to restrain exposure by the Owlett Committee of the inner workings of the WPA in Pennsylvania.

But enough, and more than enough evidence, of the abuses and political manhandling that have characterized work-relief in this State was produced at yesterday's hearing, by means of affidavits presented by former WPA officials, to give the people of Pennsylvania an amazing composite picture of the mess that has been made, by partisan whip-crackers, of a spending agency intended for relief of the poor.

The multitude of charges that have been leveled for months past at the misadministration of WPA in this State, and the frantic efforts of Eddie Jones and his brigade of Democratic job-holders to fend off investigation, have inevitably built up in the public mind the impression that WPA has been made an instrument for partisan exploitation and that it is riddled with waste and politics.

The affidavits produced yesterday—one by a former assistant director of educational and recreational projects in Philadelphia, the other by a former supervisor of similar projects in Delaware county—must deepen that impression, must add to the conviction held by an increasing number of citizens that WPA and its operations must be dragged out into the daylight and exposed to thorough investigation, no matter to what means the Democratic gag-experts resort to keep the lid clamped down.

It was testified:

That WPA jobs have been handed out as rewards to relatives of substantial contributors to Democratic campaigns.

That different scales of wages have been paid for the same kind of work, the higher being given to political favorites.

That Democratic party affiliation and Democratic political endorsement have been made prerequisites for jobs.

That relief jobs have been predesignated, with Democratic politicans specifying which persons shall be taken from direct relief rolls and given WPA places.

That more attention has been given to filling non-relief jobs on projects than taking persons from the relief rolls.

That assignment slips have been back-dated, crediting some workers with two to six weeks' pay even before starting work.

That office-workers have been designated as labor foremen on the payrolls in order to receive more money than the work entitled them to.

That men have been on the payroll for weeks at a time without even reporting for work.

These are just samples of the abuses and violations of WPA rules that have been charged against the State WPA management.

Added to the other charges leveled at it on all sides for months past, they are more than sufficient to point to the WPA in Pennsylvania as an appendage of the Democratic political machine, used as an instrument to procure patronage for political workers to build up a partisan organization in a campaign year.

To stifle investigation of these charges, to prevent thorough ventilation of this mess, on the argument that such an investigation would work harm upon the sovereign power of the United States Government, and that a committee representing the Commonwealth has no authority to look into the operations of a Federal agency, does not appear to be in the public interest.

The people have a right to know what is going on. They are the same people who put up the millions which are so lavishly distributed by the Democratic politicians running the WPA. They are the same people who are being taxed to pay the bill for State-wide direct relief, a bill that might be much smaller if WPA were more efficiently managed.

As former Senator George Wharton Pepper said at yesterday's court session: "The Legislature is entitled to know to what extent this enterprise of mercy is living up to the purpose for which it was established, or is placing a heavier burden upon the taxpayers."

If WPA were being managed as an "enterprise of mercy", the Democrats now running away from an investigation would have nothing to hide.

If it is being managed as a handy auxiliary of the Democratic political machine, the people paying the freight should know about it.

The Smith Message

By WALTER LIPPMANN

THE program of the Democratic Convention appeared to be based on the theory that nothing needed to be debated, that nothing needed to be decided. It was a most extraordinary situation.

There have been many other conventions in which there was no contest over the nomination and none over the platform. But they were very different from this one. For in all of them it was settled that the unchallenged candidate would represent the familiar and well established policies of his party. At Philadelphia Mr. Roosevelt was the unchallenged candidate in a convention which was presumably prepared to ratify whatever policies he decided to announce.

No one had ever seen in an American political party the spectacle of such personal leadership unchecked by any pretense of representative action and open deliberation.

When Theodore Roosevelt was nominated at Chicago in 1904, the outcome was a foregone conclusion because in all essential questions of party doctrine he was a regular Republican. In 1916, when Woodrow Wilson was renominated at St. Louis, there was great uncertainty about the war, but in regard to the fundamental principles of the party in domestic affairs there was no dispute. Wilson was in the main line of the Democratic tradition. In 1924 there was no question about the nomination of Calvin Coolidge on an ordinary Republican platform.

But at Philadelphia in 1936 the candidate for renomination was a man who, in the opinion of many Democrats, had radically transformed the principles of his party. He had indicated that he intended to go on transforming them. According to the program adopted, the convention was prepared to ratify his right to do that without debating the meaning of it. The very notion that such great decisions should be debated before they were made seemed to have been forgotten. The idea seemed not to have occurred to the impresarios that there should be some show of deliberation on so momentous an event in the history of the party and of the country.

They proposed instead to demonstrate their loyalty to a personal leader and to let him determine what should be their political convictions.

Mr. Roosevelt's personal supremacy at the convention had been considerably strengthened by the telegram of Al Smith and his four colleagues. If Mr. Farley had planned it himself, he could not have devised anything more perfectly calculated to arouse the fighting spirit of the President's followers and to disarm the most important Democratic opponents of the New Deal. There were to be found in the party, even at the convention, men of weight and influence who were profoundly convinced that Mr. Roosevelt had not only violated the platform of 1932 but that he had broken with the basic traditions of his party. But these men were followers of Woodrow Wilson and they were loyal to his memory. It is from them that there has come, and will continue to come, the most effective Democratic criticism of the New Deal.

The more these men think about the message, the more it will irritate them. The omission of Wilson's name from the roster of great Democrats they will regard as a studied insult, particularly because among the five signers are two men, Ex-Senator Reed and Judge Cohalan, whom they remember as inveterate personal enemies of Woodrow Wilson. Nor will they readily overlook the fact that another of the signers, Mr. Colby, was Secretary of State under Woodrow Wilson and then his law partner. All this, in conjunction with the fact that the message attacked the Roosevelt administration violently for its tariff policy, is certain to make the liberal Democrats feel that, whatever they may think of the New Deal, they must make it clear that they do not wish to be identified with this type of attack or with this combination among Mr. Roosevelt's enemies. The idea of preaching the doctrine of an exclusive tariff in the name of the party of Jefferson and Cleveland seemed to them grotesquely ignorant and presumptuous.

As for Mr. Roosevelt's followers in the party, the message handsomely confirmed their most cherished illusion. It was that all opponents of the New Deal were either members of the Liberty League or henchmen of Mr. Hearst. The message and its signers will be almost as useful to Mr. Roosevelt as the Liberty League dinner last winter, and that is saying a lot.

The net result of the incident, therefore, was to make the convention more than ever a mass meeting to acclaim the personal leadership of Mr. Roosevelt.

OUR NATION

The shouting against wealth goes on by a minority of the people—an echo from the grave of Hughey Long, perhaps.

Even our President does not hesitate to foment class hatred, yet it is not recorded that he ever earned a dollar, and therefore knows not its value.)

One way to stop this vibration is to make the cost of government so great and taxes so high that capital will seek lands under other flags—same as the cotton crop. A good start has been made in the last three years.

Those who will be fooled the greatest are the ones who are shouting the loudest. They can yet keep yelling, but it will only be at broadcasting the daily increase in unemployment. This must not happen. This country has not developed many miserly millionaires. It has brought forth many rich people who have donated millions of dollars for the nation's benefit.

This wealth is what employs the labor.

The constitution grants the liberty to gain the wealth, if honestly done.

After years of hard work and individual endeavor, fortune may follow. It is our privilege to do the same if we have brains, energy and health to accomplish it.

A jealous antagonism against wealth, in these United States, is unpatriotic, and if carried too far, may result in revolution and a dictatorship and a very low wage for labor.

Let us safeguard the priveleges we now enjoy, and keep them sacred.

Conditions can be bettered LOTS by electing Landon and Knox.

Mid-July Marks End of Farm Program Registration

Last call for enrollment in the Agricultural Conservation Program is sounded by Leonard Drake, Steuben County Conservation Agent. The registration, he states, is to be concluded by July 15 and no applications can be accepted after that date.

Mr. Drake reports that 1100 farms are now registered in the program. Practically all Steuben farmers, can qualify for benefits provided by the program.

Applications are to be made with the Conservation Agents, who for the next two weeks will maintain schedules which will take them into every township in the county. Details of the program may be obtained from these agents, Mr. Drake states.

The townships of Woodhull, Troupsburg, Rathbone and Jasper is in the territory of Edgar Cornell of Jasper. R. H. Stowell of Lindley serves the townships of Lindley, Caton, Tuscarora and Addison, and Leo Gorges of Lindley is in charge of Hornby, Erwin and Corning. Charles Wightman of Kanona is responsible for the registration in Campbell, Bradford, Bath, Cameron and Thurston.

Speeches Cited To Show Issue Facing America

By MARK SULLIVAN

In the welter of talk about platforms and issues, most of it based on partial aspects, the average man must be confused about just what is the major issue before America. The average man must long for some guidance which will reach down through the partisan and often local discussionof details which are, relatively, mere controversial trivialities. He must long to know just what is the funndamental question

In the probing to determine what the broad issue is, there is a striking parallel in three addresses at colleges during the present commencement season. One is by Mr. Walter Lippmann at the University of Rochester:

"The deepest issue of our time is whether the civilized peoples can maintain and develop a free society or whether they are to fall back into the ancient order of things when the whole of men's existence, their consciences, their science, their arts, their labor and their integrity as individuals, were at the disposition of the rulers of the state. . . . Let us, therefore, be on guard against a reaction, masquerading as enlightenment and progress, which would amalgamate them all again and undo the hard-won achievements of the emancipators of mankind. . . . Democracy has worked in America because outside the government and outside the party system there have existed independent institutions and independent men."

Strikingly parallel with that, to some extent an amplification of it, is a passage in an address by myself at Washington and Jefferson College. The address was an attempt to analyze the new conception of society and government, the "totalitarian state," which has secured foothold in three great European nations, and which threatens to spread over the world, including America:

"One main characteristic of the new order is its scope. It aims to be more than government in the old sense. Here in America we think of government as one thing and society as a separate thing. They have a relation to each other, of course, but they are not identical. We think of the bulk of our activities and institutions as outside the sphere of government. They are subject to government, yet independent of government. Our trades and professions which we all follow, our business and industrial structure, our churches, our newspapers, our endowed colleges, our fraternal societies and our insurance companies, our labor unions and our professional bodies, our endowed charities and other institutions of beneficence—all these we think of as having an existence apart from government. Even where government does touch us in America, it has been almost wholly local government, the government that reflects our local communities. The average American has been accustomed to follow fully nine-tenths of his daily affairs without giving thought to government at all. To respect the government, but not be obliged to fear it or concern ourselves about it; to observe the laws without having to think much about them, and to vote on Election Day, has been the whole of our concern about government. . . . But the new conception has a wider embrace. Indeed, the new conception insists on embracing everything. 'The state,' says Mussolini, 'is to be the sole and supreme interpreter of the needs of society.' . . . The new conception not only absorbs institutions, it asserts minute supervision and regulation over the individual. . . . The outstanding characteristic of all—the general characteristic that includes all—is a demand by the state that the individual surrender to the state not only many of his familiar freedoms and much of his free will but almost a part of his personality, and to a large degree his freedom of conscience."

The third definition of the paramount issue before America, startlingly parallel to the others, is a passage from the baccalaureate address of President Angell of Yale to the graduating class of that institution:

"What we now face is the problem whether we must resign ourselves to a completer socialization of our resources and methods than heretofore, a larger surrender of individual privilege than we have been accustomed to as regards our intrinsic rights as citizens. In the last few years, for reasons which have seemed to those in power wise and, indeed, inevitable, government has steadily sought to extend the area contained within its jurisdiction. Unless public opinion be clearly registered as opposed to further similar encroachment, it may confidently be expected to spread until, in effect, whatever the name, we take the path of the new conception of government seems too fantastic to get excited about. If he knew it as an actual and imminent danger he would get excited enough. If the movement toward imposing a new form of society and government on America came in the form of armed invasion, many Americans would freeman have something closely resembling a totalitarian state."

The parallel—indeed the identity—of thought in these three expressions from widely separate sources must carry some degree of conviction.

The issue is not easy for the average man to grasp. Even when he sees it, the notion that America might

"Watch Elephant's Smoke!" Summarizes Activities of State and National Republican Party

With the announcement that Republican State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton will manage the Republican campaign in the State, drawing upon the Executive Committee of the State Committee for counsel and determmination and amplification of politics, plans are rapidly going forward to launch the Republican drive in the state at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Eaton, in company with National Republican Committeeman Charles D. Hilles and Clarence R. King, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the State Committee, has already conferred with the National Republican Finance Committee and given that important unit his views on campaign funds needed to put the state in the Republican column. He has visited a number of midtown buildings in New York City with a view to obtaining space needed for campaign headquarters, and has taken preliminary steps leading to the organization of a Republican Veterans' League, determined to capitalize on the treatment accorded veterans by the New Deal administration since its inauguration in 1932.

Mindful of the necessity of waging a hard-hitting campaign of the State Senate is to be recaptured for the Republican Party this fall, a group of Republican Legislators, holding key positions in both Senate and Assembly, met last week in National Republican Club, 56 West 40th Street, Manhattan, and decided to lose no time in launching the Republican Legislative drive. Headed by Senator George R. Fearon and Speaker Irving M. Ives, the legislators went on record in favor of addressing meetings all over the state whenever possible, and interchanging speeches and other data, as well as for centralizing the exchange of information and other material. The Publicity Division of the Republican State Committee will act as the medium for this interchange, it was decided.

The Women's Division of the Republican National Committee in the East is also getting under way, with Miss Natalie Couch, Vice- Chairman, in charge of activities in sixteen states. Miss Couch is making plans to visit each of the states in her jurisdiction within the next thirty days. A separate publicity bureau for the activities of this unit of the National Committee will soon be set up, it was made known, and Miss Couch is scheduled to fly to Topeka, Kansas, and meet with Governor Alf M. Landon early in July. Upon her return east she is scheduled to stop at Chicago and meet with Colonel Knox.

In short, and to sum up the present and contemplated activities of both the Republican State Committee and the Eastern Division of the Republican National Committee: "Watch the Elephant's Smoke!"

The East now has had its opportunity to see at close range John D. M. Hamilton, Chairman of the The East Looks Over John Hamilton National Republican Committee, and it has found him good. Although tired, white and haggard from the tremendous pressure he has undergone during the last year, he scored a tremendous hit at the dinner given him last week under the auspices of the Republican State Committee, the National Republican Finance Committee and the Republican County Committee of New York County. More than 3,000 persons gathered in the Hotel Astor and cheered him to the echo as he attacked the New Deal and Postmaster-General James A. Farley. Dynamic, forceful, diplomatic and entirely fearless, Mr. Hamilton has generated confidence in Republican success this Fall, and has already won thousands of new and independent voters to the standards of the National Republican ticket of Landon and Knox. In addition, he has already taken Postmaster General Farley's measure in two newspaper clashes.

Again, last week he and Congressman Martin met with the members of the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee and driving home his observations in crisp, pungent phrases, he let it be known that the National Committee would leave no stone unturned in working with the State Committee and in staging an unprecedented, intensive campaign in the largest state in the Union.

Congressman Martin was similarly outspoken at the meeting of the Executive Committee, and the Massachusetts publisher—he publishes a daily newspaper in that state—was extremely confident of Republican success here in November.

A Contrast in Conventions

A very definite contrast was offered between the Republican National Convention and the more recent conclave of the Democrats in Philadelphia. The Cleveland meeting of the Republicans was an unbossed, a more sober and less theatrical parley, unmarred by the circus methods of the Democrats. Of these methods Sir Wilmot Lewis of The London Times, an observer at the Philadelphia convention, said: "The convention (Democratic) was a spectacle, not a symposium—a debauch and not a debate". A reporter for the New York Times wrote of the convention: "The spectacle which the delegates to this Democratic convention have created here is indeed a rich one. Meeting supposedly to weigh weighty national problems, they look like guests at a masquerade." Well, the New Deal has been described as a grotesque travesty on government, and as masquerade of honesty in politics so, perhaps, it was fitting to hold a convention which so thoroughly represented the existing Washington sideshow.

"Happy Worrior" Absent

Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York State, former Democratic candidate for President, and once termed "The Happy Worrior" by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, was absent from the Philadelphia Convention of jobholders, but his theme song was not. While Farley cohorts tore their hair, in impotent rage, band after band in the convention hall broke into the familiar strains of "The Sidewalks of New York" and there was scattered cheering from various parts of the auditorium for the thoroughly Democratic statesman from New York's East Side who had "taken a walk".

Newspaper observers at the convention commented freely upon the fact that the Roosevelt-Farley Brain Trust was in the saddle, and old line Democratic leaders were thrust into the background or ignored. The "Braves" of Tammany Hall were among those snubbed, and mutterings of retaliations were heard in the Tammany delegation. The repudation of Governor Smith, one-time political mentor of Governor Herbert H. Lehman, did not make a hit with the Smith supporters at the convention nor those who stayed at home. After all, a man who has done as much for his party as has Alfred E. Smith, cannot be successfully "smeared" even by the Michelson "Smear Everybody" Brigade. In contrast to Lehman's repudiation of Governor Smith was the statement of Liuet. Gov. M. William Bray, when asked if he was correctly quoted in voicing friendship for Governor Smith, told newspapermen, "Yes, I was correctly quoted. And I'll remain Al's friend for all time."

Car Owners Get GOP "Break"

Car owners in New York State fell heir to the benefits of one of the many activities of the Republican-controlled Assembly yesterday when one cent is dropped from the four cent emergency gasoline taxes, heaped upon the motoring public by the Democratic administration at Albany.

"The reduction of one cent in the emergency gasoline taxes in the State was a Republican program measure", said Speaker Irving M. Ives, in calling attention to the reduction in gasoline taxes.

"The proposal to reduce the so-called 'emergency' gas taxes first appeared in the agenda of the Republican conference of legislators and county chairmen held in Albany last December", Speaker Ives went on, "and we followed the program adopted at this conference to the letter. We had promised the people of the state relief from the ever-mounting tax burden and, during the session of 1936, we made good our promises.

"We felt, and still feel, that entirely too much legislation labeled 'Emergency' has been foisted upon the people of both nation and state by New Deal administrators and manipulators", the Speaker of the Assembly continued, "and we determined we would examine for ourselves the need for the extension of much of this legislation. Our slash in the emergency gasoline taxes was a case in point, and the action of the Republican Assembly in bringing about this reduction has won the enthusiastic approval of the car-owning public of the entire state. These car-owners, as well as other taxpayers, are completely aware that they have been a shining mark for successive democratic administrations in the state ta shoot at, and now that a halt has been called to the practice of increasing the tax burdens of these car-owners, a definite step has been made towards discouraging the tax exploitation of special groups."

The aged of the state also benefit now from the work of the Republican Assembly this year when New York State receives about $12,500,000 from the Federal government to defray the cost of old age pensions. The Federal payment follows the passage of the Wadsworth bill, introduced by Assemblyman James J. Wadsworth, which reduced the age limitation of persons receiving benefits under the plan from 70 to 65 years.

"Don't Think the Administration Has Turned Backward in Course" Sen. Fearon Tells Steuben Group

Administration Has Burned Its Bridges Behind it; Avers Onondaga Legislator Before Meeting of Steuben Republicans at Hornell—Warns That Complexion of Supreme Court May Be Changed in Event of Roosevelt Re-election.

Republicans from all sections of Steuben County rallied in an enthusiastic gathering at Hornell last Wednesday to hear Senator George R. Fearon, minority leader of the New York State Senate, who warned that the Washington administration had burned its bridges behind it and would not turn backward in its course.

Senator Fearon spoke in part as follows:

"The Republican party today is not a party of blind opposition to everything that has been done at Washington. Its program is not purely destructive. It condemns the fundamental policies of the New Deal, but in addition it offers a constructive platform pointing the way to a return to American constitutional government. No party that is alive can fail to have within itself elements that are in conflict as to methods and means of accomplishing a common end. These conflicting elements have been reconciled. Differing opinions have been brought into harmony, and the party is prepared to enter this momentous campaign a unified aggressive organization. We are no longer in retreat before the high sounding plausible phrases of the New Deal. We are prepared to carry the fight into the camp of those who seek to subvert the American form of government.

"Let us consider for a moment what the New Deal party is confronted with at Philadelphia. The course has already been chartered. It cannot turn back. It cannot repudiate the acts of the present administration. It can nominate only one candidate. Whether its platform endorses the policies of the New Deal and pledges a continuance of these policies, or whether it holds out a vague promise of government within the Constitution, its pledges will be meaningless. The actions of the administration will speak londer than the words of the convention. The complete repudiation by the New Deal party of the platform adopted by the Democratic party in 1932 means that no promise which may be made at Philadelphia can be relied upon. Parties and candidates who break their promises once, like individuals who are faithless to their pledges, can no longer be trusted by honest men and women. That is the position in which the New Deal party finds itself today. Its platform has already been written by its acts and its utterances of its spokesmen during the past three and a half years. Nothing that is said at Philadelphia will mean anything.

"This is not a contest between the Republican Party and the Democratic party. It is a contest between New Dealers and anti New Dealers, between the Republican Party and those who adhere to its principles rather than to its name, on the one hand, and those who betrayed the once great Democratic Party, on the other hand. It is a contest between those who believe in the fundamental principles of our government and those who believe those principles have outlived their usefulness.

"During the coming campaign I hope that the acts of the New Deal administration will be carefully scrutinized. I hope that every single detail will be gone into and that all its policies will be subjected to a critical examination. I hope, however, that in our examination of the trees we do not lose sight of the forest. In our valuation of the results of the various acts of the administration, it is of the utmost importance that we not lose sight of the general design nor fail to recognize the ends to which its policies must inevitably lead. It makes no difference whether or not there is in the mind of the President and his advisers a deliberate intent to alter fundamentally the American form of government. It makes no difference whether the policies of the administration are the result of confusion of thought among the brain-trusters and the President's many advisers or whether there is a cunning and ulterior purpose behind their acts. The design is there nevertheless. One act in a planned economy, such as the administration advocates, leads inevitably to another. Our economic system cannot exist partially under dictation from a central government and partially in an atmosphere of free competition. It can no more do so than the Nation could exist half slave and half free.

"Nothing illustrates this better than the course of the ill-fated AAA. When the administration undertook to control the production of certain basic crops it found that the land taken out of cultivation was planted to other crops. When it extended its control to these new crops the land was planted to still other crops. One act led to another until the whole policy was reduced to an absurdity in the Potato Control Law and was finally thrown boot and breeches out the window by the Supreme Court.

"It is not as though we did not have the experience of other countries to guide us in this crisis. The New Deal is an old experiment. It was not conceived in the brains of the 'starry eyed' braintrusters. It was no inspiration sent from Heaven to show us the way out of the depression. Every step in its development has had its counterpart in Europe. We have spent huge sums of public money on boondoggles. Mussolini spent huge sums digging up the galleys of Caligula. Russia had its planned economy and its five year plan. Hitler has his "Must Bills" and usurped the rights of the Reichstag. Our disease, the depression, spread to this country from Europe. The cure—the alleged cure—originated there, and the cure is worse than the disease. Planned economy is nothing new. It has been tried and tried again. It leads inevitably to dictotorship, whether the forms of Democratic government are retained or not, and to a curtailment of the fundamental rights and the freedom of the individual.

"The administration has been stopped in its progress toward a planned and controlled economy by the Supreme Court of the United States. All of its major acts have been declared unconstitutional, in many cases by a divided court. But don't think that the administration on that account has turned backward in its course. It cannot turn back. It has burned its bridges behind it. Already it is planning ways and means by which it can circumvent recent court decisions. The simplest way is to change the court. The next administration will be called upon to appoint new members to the Supreme Court of the United States to take the place of those who resign in the not distant future due to their age. The whole complexion of the Supreme Court may be changed in the next few years, and if the President of the United States has it in mind to appoint justices who will be subservient to his wishes, acts which have been declared unconstitutional by the present court may be validated in some future time."

Brotherhood of Locomotive Workers Endorses Geo. A. King

Chairman of Corning Republican City Committee is Commended to Voters for District Attorney's Post Praised for Uniform Fairness — Now Engaged to End Steuben Pollution Evil Upon Plea of Sportsmen.

Corning, June—Attorney George A. King, chairman of the Corning Republican City Committee, has received from H. D. Gamble, secretary of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, Fellowship Lodge No. 21, of Corning, a letter of which he is extremely proud. Mr. Gamble wrote him that at the June 5 meeting of the Corning Lodge a resolution was passed praising him for his uniform fairness to organized labor, and railroad organizations in particular, and commending him to the voters of the county as the Republican candidate for district attorney.

Mr. Gamble commented upon the manner in which Attorney King had advised the organization in trying periods and declared that the Corning Lodge not only endorsed but recommended the lawyer to all voters as a friend of working men and women and particularly for his uniform kindness to those in organized ranks. In conclusion Mr. Gamble said: "Attorney King has always been our friend."

Attorney King is now engaged in a legal battle for people not belonging to an organization, residents along Steuben County streams which have been contaminated by tanning acids released by an Elkland tanning company. One week ago thousands of fish were killed by these acids, river banks were contaminated by their dead bodies, farmers taking tourists were unable to accomodate guests on account of the stench, and children were prevented from using the streams. Attorney King is preparing to act in the matter, upon the plea of sportsmen, and declares he will carry the case to the United States Supreme Court, if necessary, to end this evil for all time. Attorney King is one lawyer who evinces no fear of corporations or corporation lawyers and will battle them on their own ground. Sportsmen predict that he will succeed in this move in behalf of Steuben County residents who enjoy using its streams for recreation.

Senator Warner Seeks Re-election

Announcement of his candidacy for reelection to another term has been made by State Senator Earle S. Warner of Phelps, who has represented the counties of Steuben, Yates and Ontario in the upper house of the state legislative body for the past four years.

During his legislative service, Senator Warner has become one of the most useful and influential members of the state governing body, due to his rigid attention to duty, sound judgement and unquestioned ability. It is said that he is consulted more frequently and his advice is sought more often by both Republican and Democratic senators than any other member of the upper house.

Senator Warner is a member of four committees: Judiciary, Internal Affairs, Civil Service, Pensions and Reapportionment. The first two are among the most powerful and important committees of the senate. He is a forceful debater and speaks often on matters of concern to the people. He led debate against a bill which proposed to eliminate the office of school collector in rural school districts. Opposition was based on the ground that it was only the first step to break down the rural school system. He maintained that a good rural school system is necessary for proper agricultural standards. The proposed legislation was defeated.

Senator Warner introduced and successfully brought to passage legislation providing that villages cannot be held in damages for change of grade on highways built by the state. Previously, some villages had been compelled to pay heavy damages, even where the highways were built under state direction. He introduced a companion bill with Assemblyman Hall which made mandatory the submission to the people in 1936 of the question as to whether a constitutional convention shall be held.

He introduced a companion bill on emergency legislation extending time in which collectors are required to complete tax collections. He sponsored with Assemblyman Otto, a bill which prohibits the sale of liquor to children under eighteen years of age. The bill was killed in the Democratic codes committee after passage in the assembly.

Senator Warner successfully sponsored legislation increasing the powers of public welfare officials to protect the public interest in connection with mortages given to secure relief. He introduced legislation reducing the number of preemptory challenges and which if passed would serve to expedite trial of criminal cases.

Senator Warner is a busy man who has always led an active life. He is a lawyer, a practical farmer, owns and operates two farms and takes part in numerous public matters. He was born in the town of Phelps, Ontario County, was graduated from Phelps High School and in 1902 received a law degree at Hobart College. At Hobart, he was engaged in many activities on the campus. He was awarded the college letter eleven times, served as captain of football, captain of track, was winner of the intercollegiate mile and half-mile track events and was awarded the oratorical prize in his freshman year and the White Essay prize in his senior year.

He was director of war savings for Ontario County in 1919-1920. He served as clerk of the Board of Supervisors and as county attorney for Ontario County under separate appointments for fourteen years. He twice served as district attorney of Ontario County under special appointment. He was a member of the Ontario County Republican Committee for several years and is a member of the law firm of Warner and Hollands with offices in Canandaigua.

Senator Warner is president of the National Bank of Phelps. He is a member of the Grange and is actively interested farming. He is a member of the Masons, Elks, Exchange Club and the National Republican Club of New York City.

sary by the invalidation of the original "little NRA" industry regulation measure, and against the soil conservation act to replace the outlawed AAA. He voted for the rural electrification bill.

He faced the political danger in voting with the majority of his colleagues to cite Doctor Townsend, old-age pension leader, for contempt, when he refused to testify before a special investigating committee.

He also voted against the inflationary Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill, which had the support of Father Coughlin.

Congressman Cole has been working on three regular committees, District of Columbia, Insular Affairs and Education. As a member of the Insular Affairs Committee, he made the trip to the Philippines last fall in company with a large delegation of Congressional bigwigs to attend the inauguration of the Philippine Commonwealth.

He has also been a member of the special committee of the House to investigate chain stores and the American Retail Federation. This committee, headed by Congressman Patman of Texas, offered the Patman-Robinson chain-store regulation bill to equalize the financial difference between large and small dealers and retailers.

Cole was a member of the special flood relief committee for New York State, to get federal funds for a control program.

While there has been much criticism of the New Deal work-relief setup, and the WPA billions allegedly being used by the Administration to build up a nation-wide political machine, Congressman Cole was the first to introduce legislation intended to regulate this situation.

He offered a bill, amending the federal corrupt practices act, to penalize any person in federal employ for using work-relief funds for the purpose of political organization. This, however, was given little consideration in the Democratic-controlled judiciary committee.

Attacked Tugwell

Cole also made several speeches in the House attacking the Rural Resettlement Administration, and particularly its head, Rexford Tugwell, described by Republicans as one of the "crack-brained New Deal theorists."

Commenting on his first term as a member of the House, he stated, "I like being a Congressman. It is a great opportunity for public service."

The Congressional Directory contains the biographies of all the members of the House and Senate. Some of these are very lengthy, extolling the personal achievements of the individual members. Some are short and to the point, but there is none more brief and succinct than: "Representative W. Sterling Cole, Republican, Bath, N. Y.; attorney, married."

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Gladstone And Family Move From Pulaski To Make New Home in Addison

New Supervising Principal of Addison High School Takes up His Residence on Tuscarora Street — Many Tributes Heaped Upon Departing Couple by Friends at Their Former Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving R. Gladstone and children, Richard, Margaret and Billy moved to Addison Tuesday from their former home in Pulaski. They are now occupying the residence long owned by the late Jerome C. Husted on Tuscarora street. Mr. Gladstone is ready to assume his new work as supervising principal of Addison High School.

The high esteem with which the Gladstones were regarded in their former home may be gleaned from the following clipping out of the Palladium-Times of Oswego.

Pulaski, June 29 — Principal and Mrs. Irving I. Gladstone and family are leaving Tuesday morning for Addison where they will make their future home with Mr. Gladstone assuming his duties as principal of the new high school there at the opening of the school year. Mr. Gladstone has been principal of Pulaski academy for the past 14 years and during that time has seen 570 students receive their diplomas, 100 more than in the entire previous history of the school.

During their long stay in Pulaski the Gladstone family has impressed itself deeply upon the community, not only along educational, but along social and civic lines. Both have been extremely active in all affairs for betterment of the community and also in the affairs of the Congregational church. Mr. Gladstone has been active in the American Legion post and Mrs. Gladstone had a similar interest in auxiliary affairs, having been head of both the local and the county organizations. She has also been president of several local women's clubs and is known not only in Pulaski but also throughout Central New York as a singer of unusual ability because of her frequent radio broadcasts over Syracuse stations.

During the past two weeks many farewell affairs have been held in honor of the departing family, including a two-table contract bridge party by Mrs. F. F. Reasoner, a luncheon for 12 given by Mrs. Clayton I. Miller at Krebs, Skaneateles, a luncheon for 12 given by Mrs. Edward Orton, Jr., a luncheon for eight given by Mrs. William P. Curtiss, and on Friday evening a dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Myron Burghdurf given by them and Mr. and Mrs. George A. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. George Woods, Mr. and Mrs. W. Taylor Barr and Mr. and Mrs. Roger C. Blakely. Farewell affairs were also given by the American Legion post and auxiliary, by the Pulaski academy faculty and the Wednesday Bridge Club.

A short time ago the following verse written by a member of Pulaski Academy faculty was published in the Pulaski paper together with a "tribute to Irving R. Gladstone". Addison people can rest assured from these expressions of sentiment from their former friends that the Gladstone family will find a place in the heart of this village.

Dedicated to the Gladstones

Just fourteen years ago there came
A mentor, leader, friend,
A personage with whom we all
Worked gladly for one end.
That end was for the betterment
Of dear old P. H. S.
And now to bid goodbye to him
Brings sorrow, we confess.
We've watched throughout the passing years
The growth of our fine school
And no one for one moment doubts
That GROWTH has been the rule.
From Senior classes numbering few,
Say twenty-five, or so,
Each year has been a larger class
From graduation go.
Our faculty of which we're proud
Was built upon keen thought,
And those who've stayed these many years
Much glad acclaim have brought.
We surely can't forget the maid who came here as a bride
And walked along the wedding path
As helper by his side.
We've watched their splendid family
As years did come and go,
First Richard came to bless their hearts
With pride we watched him grow.
Then Margaret came, the sweetest miss
That ever graced a home,
And she and Richard made a pair
As fine as e'er was known.
And then at last came Billy
He's still a baby, too
It won't be long, however,
Before to school he'll go.
Such children give us cause to think,
And feel their home is blest.
But now that they must leave us soon
We'll wish them all the best.
The town that gains this family
Is really rich indeed;
While we are that much poorer
Because we'll feel the need
Of someone who has been our guide,
And made us friends sincere.
We hope all future passing years
Will bring them joy and cheer.
Now this is all we have to say,
Our thoughts won't come at call,
We all unite in wishing
Great happiness to you all.

A Tribute to Irving R. Gladstone

"From this community has gone a man who ever placed the building of our school above his own personal life; a man whose morals are above reproach, one who for fourteen years has stood as a splendid example to the youth of the town. He would not bend to curry favor, nor deviate from the straight path of duty as he saw it, to gain his own ends.

"The departure of Irving R. Gladstone leaves an empty place in the hearts of the people of this village and in our community life."

CORRECTION

Last week's issue of this paper, in an article dealing with the retirement of Principal Willson as head of Addison High School, contained the statement that the old gymnasium building, now serving as headquarters for the Agricultural Department, had been purchased from the former owners by the Board of Education. This statement was incorrect. The building and property was purchased by Miss Jessica Turner and presented by her to the school.

Work Starts On New Scow

Dyke construction on the south side of Tuscarora Creek is being pushed with renewed vigor, according to Robert Ginnane, WPA superintendent. It is expected that this will enable approximately thirty per cent more water to pass under the trestle and to largely remove the danger of an overflow at any point above.

Troupsburg Captures First Half Pennant in Little Six League

Tigers Win Over Lindley by 4-3 Score — Ike Clarke Turns in Sixth Victory in as Many Starts by Limiting Visitors to Two Bingles.

The Troupsburg Tigers nailed the first-half pennant of the Little Six League to the home town flagpole Sunday with a 4-3 victory over Lindley. Lindley, classed as favorite to cop the pennant honors, fell twice before the clawing onslaught of the Tigers in as many starts, thereby providing the necessary margin of victory for the latter.

Ike Clarke, on the mound for the Tigers, turned in his sixth victory in as many starts by limiting the visitors to two bingles. Although his control was a bit faulty in the pinches, Ike turned on the heat when the pressure became heavy and pulled out on top. However, he struck out only five men, in comparison to his usual twelve to fifteen.

Ray Terwilliger of Lindley served them up for the opposition until the sixth when he retired in favor of Manager Toby. Toby finished the game in a large manner, weakening only in the ninth to allow the winning run to score.

Troupsburg scored the initial marker in the fourth and added two more in the sixth. Lindley tied the score in the seventh on an unusual fluke. With the bases loaded and one out, a ground ball was returned to the plate as the start of a double force play. However, the Tiger catcher failed to touch the rubber before returning the ball to first to complete the double. The runner scored and on the next play, a single to right, the two tying runs scored before the side was retired. Troupsburg tallied the winning marker in the last of the ninth, when Dempsey smashed a line drive to center to score Hober from third.

Pitchers Toby and Clarke showed the spectators how the game was played in a two-inning pitchers' duel, the last of the seventh to the first of the ninth inclusive, when only the necessary twelve batters entered the batter's box.

Troupsburg, with a clean sweep so far this season, should get the bulk of the money to cop the second half honors, although the sledding may not be too easy.

Pep-Os Yield to Knoxville in Contest Marked By Flashy Fielding

Bakers Stake Opponents to Five Run Lead Which They Are Unable to Overcome—Heidrick Makes Splendid Play on Kelts' Line Drive — Grange Hauls Down Long Drive in Deep Center Garden.

Five runs rushed over the pan in the second and third innings of Sunday's Tri-County League contest at Knoxville gave the home team victory over the Pep-O Bakers by a margin of 5 to 1. Both teams played excellent ball, although several of the Knoxville hits were decidedly scratchy. The Bakers, on the other hand, were lining the sphere into the hands of the Quaker Staters all afternoon.

In the second stanza, Husted was out, Hewson to Kelly. Beebe and Kelts hit in succession. Sawyer flew to Hadlock. Isaman, gained a free ticket, filling the bags. Clark scratched a hit over the infield, two men scoring. Monroe laid a weak tap over the infield and Warner grounded out, with three Knoxville markers showing on the scoreboard. Another pair was entered in the third. Rice and Husted hit and Sawyer did the same. Rice was thrown out by Robbins at third. Sawyer was out, Robbins to Kelly and Isaman flew to Robbins.

Addison scored in the seventh. John Grange hit for two bases. Beers was out on a play from short to first. Don Grange grounded out and J. Grange scored on Hewson's single. Hewson pilfered the midway sack and Heidrick walked as Riker flew to Clark for the third out.

Every man in the Knoxville lineup fielded beautifully. Heidrick, for Addison, made a splendid catch of Kelts' line drive in the fifth and doubled Beebe off first. At another point in the game, Grange went back to the fence after a long fly by Husted. The ball leaped out of his glove and continued over the fence. The Pep-O Centerfielder leaped the barrier, recovered the pill and threw to Hewson who threw to Beers and nailed the man at third.

Buffalo, July 1—Formal registration in the six-week summer session of the University of Buffalo will take place on the North Main street campus, Monday, July 6, according to Dr. L. O. Cummings, director of the summer session. Instructors in the various courses will be available for consultation throughout the day. Classes will begin at 8:00 A. M. on Tuesday.

The 150 courses in arts and sciences, business administration, education, fine arts, library science, nursing and social work which are being offered by the summer session this year are accepted toward degrees on the same basis as those taken in the other divisions of the university.

Regular summer session classes meet daily except Saturday, and are for the most part held during the morning hours, in order to leave the afternoons free for laboratory work, study and recreation. Classes will be held on Saturday, July 11, to make up for registration day.

The summer session will be terminated with the conclusion of final examinations on Saturday, August 15.

Wilson Bennett Owns Only Living Proven Sire in County

To date there is only one living proven sire in Steuben County, this being owned by Wilson Bennett of Painted Post. This purebred Holstein sire is proved by the Southern Tier Dairy Herd Improvement Association and the United States Department of Agriculture.

From seven daughters and dame comparisons, this herd sire increased the production of his daughters over their dams 19.1 per cent in milk and 12.8 per cent in butterfat. There was a total milk increase of 1,681 pounds of milk and 43 pounds of butterfat.

To decrease the spread of disease from old hens to growing chicks, never allow them to mix or even to use separate parts of the same building.

BRASS TACKS For POULTRY RAISERS

By BURTON P. THARP

RANGE

A good range for poultry corrects or prevents many undesirable tendencies and diseases. If the poultry raised has the space to permit his stock to exercise he will find the pullets in excellent condition for laying in the fall. The cockerels will develop into husky, vigorous birds from which breeders may be chosen.

A simple, inexpensive shelter is all that is necessary to house the birds through the summer months and early fall. The shelters may vary in size depending upon the number of birds it is to house. It should be built with a gable roof having the eaves extend to within two feet of the ground. This type of roof gives protection against driving rain and wind.

The frame of the shelter should be covered with one-inch mesh poultry netting to protect the birds from rats and other vermin. The framing may be built with two by two soft lumber or seven-eighths by four inch white pine. No siding need be used.

The door should be in one end and the roosts placed crosswise of the structure leaving a path in the center from the front to the back for the purpose of cleaning and also to make it possible to catch the birds.

Some poultrymen use wire floors in range shelters but this is not necessary. The shelter should be as light as it can be made in order that it may be easily moved. Most State Agriculture Colleges have booklets which may be secured by sending a postal to the college.

Too close confinement of poultry during the summer often leads to cannibalism. The chicks may begin by picking the toes of other birds. When the feathers begin to develop birds which do not have sufficient range or feeding space may start tail-picking. When once the blood is drawn the victim will be eaten b ythe flock unless it is removed.

In 1776 the first thing people thought of doing to announce their future independence was to let out shouts of joy - - - ring all the bells in town - - - make so much noise that no one could be found who had not heard the tidings. They they got to work to assure political liberty.

We should be doing the same thing today, for a different reason. Years of dull, stupid business is too long - - - too much. Let us announce our future independence - - - let the welkin ring - - - let no one fail to hear - - - WE RENOUNCE DEPRESSION - - - and now let's get to work, in the spirit of '76 to assure future economic liberty.
